

Courageous Pedagogy is...

...the ability and bravery to advocate for play and developmentally appropriate practice. By courageously disrupting outdated models of education and embracing what we know to be best for children of all ages.

It is having the agency to believe that despite the challenges, knowing we can still make a difference. We can remain committed to play based approaches whilst navigating top-down pressures.

Courageous pedagogy is not pointless rebellion but a form of activism that places children at the centre of their own world.
